A – Yes, as a resident or as a guest staying briefly with a resident.
6. Q - What is "Stacking" in pickleball and how can it be done legally?
A - Stacking is a strategy used in pickleball when players on a team are not in traditional positioning and are instead rearranged in order to keep one player on a particular side of the court. The shift usually takes place after the serve. The key to doing this legally, is knowing which player serves and which player receives the serve. The simple way to remember this is by the score. If your score is even (after a side-out) the first player, which began the game as the server, serves (or receives on a side-out). If your score is odd, the other player begins.
